

Intention Science

THE TILLER FOUNDATION

September 2026

Dr. William A. Tiller believed that our understanding of human psychology could be expanded by recognizing the important roles of consciousness, intention, emotion, mind, and spirit in human experience. His Psychoenergetic Science sought to provide a broader framework for understanding how these dimensions may interact with the physical body and with one another.

For psychologists and therapists, this perspective offers an invitation to look beyond the purely physical or cognitive dimensions of the individual and consider the whole person—including intention, coherence, emotional state, and deeper aspects of consciousness. Dr. Tiller explored how this expanded understanding might complement psychotherapy and contribute to a more comprehensive approach to human wellbeing.

His White Paper, Towards an Orthodox Science That Meaningfully Integrates with Psychotherapy, describes his vision of bringing psychoenergetic principles into meaningful dialogue with conventional psychology and psychotherapy.

For Dr. Tiller, this was not about replacing established psychological approaches, but about expanding the picture—inviting practitioners and researchers to consider whether consciousness and intention might be meaningful variables in understanding human experience and transformation.

If consciousness and intention are meaningful aspects of who we are, what might that mean for the way we understand ourselves, relate to one another, and approach our own growth?

PUTTING INTENTION INTO PRACTICE

One of the most important aspects of Dr. Tiller's work was that it was never intended simply to be studied. It invites us to explore these ideas in our own lives.

Although The Tiller Foundation's individual Intention Broadcasting Services have concluded, we have created a powerful collection of free Intention Imprinting Resources to help you develop and continue your own intention and meditation practice.

These resources include Dr. Tiller's intention statements, guidance for meditation and imprinting, and educational materials that can help you explore the principles behind his work for yourself.

Whether you have practiced intentional meditation for years or are just beginning, we invite you to explore these resources and discover what may be meaningful for you.

A GLOBAL INTENTION FOR THE ASD COMMUNITY

There is one important intention broadcast that continues.

Inspired by the encouraging results of our Autism Spectrum Disorder (ASD) pilot study and Dr. Tiller's wish that his research benefit as many people as possible, The Tiller Foundation has initiated an ongoing global intention broadcast for all individuals with Autism Spectrum Disorder and their caregivers.

It is offered completely free, worldwide, and no registration or sign-up is required.

It is our sincere hope that this ongoing intention may contribute to greater well-being, resilience, and support for ASD individuals, their families, and caregivers around the world.

HELP US SHARE DR. TILLER'S WORK

Could You Be the Person We're Looking For?

Somewhere in our community may be someone who appreciates Dr. Tiller's work, enjoys social media, and would love to help us introduce his ideas to more people.

Perhaps that person is you—or someone you know.

The Tiller Foundation is looking for a volunteer to help us maintain and expand our presence on Facebook and YouTube.

We are not looking for a major time commitment—just one or two hours a week from someone who is comfortable with social media and would enjoy helping us share Dr. Tiller's research, videos, insights, and legacy with a wider audience.

You don't need to be an expert in Psychoenergetic Science. What matters most is enthusiasm for the work, some familiarity with social media, reliability, and a desire to help.

This is an opportunity to become more directly involved with the Foundation and help ensure that Dr. Tiller's ideas remain accessible to both longtime followers and a new generation discovering his work.

If this sounds interesting—or if someone immediately comes to mind—we would truly enjoy hearing from you.

I'M INTERESTED!

Help us keep the conversation growing.
